LET THE CELEBRATION BEGIN!

After 100 years of existence the Classical Association of Virginia remains a viable force in promoting classical teaching and culture in the Commonwealth of Virginia. Gathering for its first meeting at the John Marshall High School in Richmond in November of 1910, the group's founding purpose is realized through annual contests and awards. Collaboration between college faculty and high school/middle school Latin teachers has strengthened the meetings and programs over the decades. The long tradition of classics in Virginia has resulted in the significant growth of enrollments in secondary and colleges/universities, both public and private, throughout the state. No other state can boast being the founder of the National Latin Exam, envisioned and implemented by long-time CAV members. No other state can boast the longevity of a state sponsored summer Latin Academy for secondary high school students. The expertise and support of CAV members championed these causes initially and sustains them today. There is much to recall and to look forward to as the Classical Association of Virginia begins its year-long centennial celebration.

Fall 2010 Celebration Highlights

The Fall CAV Centennial Meeting will be held on Saturday, October 30th in conjunction with the 90th Anniversary Meeting of CAMWS-Southern Section in Richmond (October 28-30). Registration will be held on the second floor of the Omni Hotel prior to the start of the afternoon activities. From 1:30-3:30 p.m. members will tour the newly renovated Virginia Museum of Fine Arts with special emphasis on viewing those objects with a classical theme. A scavenger hunt and self- or guide-led tours are also options for those attending. The museum offers a venue for lunch, as well. Shuttles will ferry CAV members and CAMWS guests to and from the site.

Hunter R. Rawlings III

Hunter R. Rawlings III, Professor of Classics at Cornell University will lecture on "Virginia's Founding Fathers and the Classics" in the Omni's Magnolia Room from 4-5 p.m. Professor Rawlings served as President of Cornell University from 1995-2003 and is an expert in Greek historiography and in the classical background of the American Founders. A native Virginian, he has twice been Visiting University Professor in the Department of Classics at the University of Virginia.

A reception and banquet will round out the Fall CAV Centennial Meeting festivities. Centennial greetings from leaders in classical organizations throughout the nation will highlight the banquet program. See page 11 of this issue for registration information.

CAV PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Salvete Omnes,

August, and the school year begins to circle around again. The turn from summer activities—work or play, or usually some combination of the two—and the impending return to the familiar and usually fond routine can sometimes seem unwelcome. If it does for me, I try to recall the sentences below, about how new this all is for the young students who join us each fall. It starts with a proposition, then shows how to countermand it

• *“Piget ea quae nobis notissima sunt saepissime repetere.”
si usitata et parvulis congruentia saepe repetere fastidimus, congruamus eis per fraternum, paternum, maternumque amorem, et etiam nobis nova videbuntur et nos in illis discamus quodam modo quae docemus, et nobis nova fiunt quae vetera fuerunt.*

• “It’s a pain to repeat over and over things already familiar to us.”
if we cringe at repeating again what we usually say (and what fits the young), we can join them though brotherly, fatherly, and motherly affection, and this can also seem new to us and we can learn through them, in a way, what we teach, and what was old becomes new for us.” (Augustine, De catechizandis rudibus 12.17, edited)

Augustine goes on to compare this to showing someone a beautiful landscape we’ve seen many times: when we show it to others we can see it anew, if we can imaginatively renew that pleasure again through their eyes (ut nostra delectatio in eorum novitatis delectatione renovetur).

As we dive into teaching this fall, keep in mind the big year this is for CAV, marked by the Centennial Meeting (details in this newsletter). Twenty years ago when I moved to Virginia, I found that the reputation I had only known second-hand was true: the quality and range of Latin teaching in Virginia amazed me then and continues to amaze. We have a chance this fall to celebrate a century of this excellence, and I encourage all of you to join us in Richmond on the 30th of October.

Note also that CAMWS-Southern Section returns to us this year (October 28-30 in Richmond), in conjunction with our centennial celebration, and we want to have a signal presence at the Foreign Language Association of Virginia (October 8-9, also in Richmond)

In anticipation of the spring, I’d like to encourage all of you to nominate teachers and students for our various honors and awards: some years we have many nominations, some very few, but we know that there are deserving teachers whom all of us would like to recognize. Keep an eye on the newsletters and the CAV web site for description, information, and deadlines.

In the meantime, dulce est desipere in loco. Andrew S. Becker

CAV AWARDS - 2010

Wayne W. Wray CAV Student Scholarship: Bryan Kauder

Citation edited from the recommendation by Sue Robertson

The 2010 recipient of the Wayne W. Wray CAV Student Scholarship is Bryan Kauder of Midlothian High School.

When I think of Bryan Kauder, his commitment to his studies, school and community come to mind at once. He is serving as president of four organizations his senior year: Latin Club (co-president), Drama Club, Mu Alpha Theta (math honorary), and National Honor Society. In addition, Bryan serves on the Honor Court and Sidekick Committee (new student orientation program).

Bryan's service to the Latin Club is phenomenal. As first vice-president of the VJCL, he was responsible for membership and publicity for the state. Not only did Virginia earn second place in publicity in national competition, but Bryan aided his school in earning first place as an individual school in the NJCL Publicity Contest. He drafted and received proclamations for National Classics Week for his county and for the state of Virginia from then Governor Kaine. At the annual VJCL Convention he initiated and organized a "Funny Money" campaign (collection) which netted $3000 for the FeedMore, Inc. (combination of the Central Virginia Food Bank and Meals on Wheels) and was a recipient of the first "Spirit of JCL" award for his outstanding achievements to promote the classics at all levels.

In addition, Bryan has served as a lead elementary teacher for the club's elementary Latin program, leading a group of his peers in presenting Latin lessons to third graders at a local elementary school over a nine week period. He also attended the 2008 Governor's Latin Academy and was recognized as a 2008 "Student of the Year" for Chesterfield County. As a National Merit Semifinalist and ranking #1 in his graduating class, Bryan Kauder is the epitome of the ideal student.

As for his future endeavors, I am confident that Bryan will accomplish much and will be a model citizen. I can envision him using his skills in oratory and ancient politics to follow his dream of a career in oncology or biomedical research. With his winning personality and oratorical skills, Bryan could become quite the icon for public health.

Lurlene W. Todd Award: Katherine T. "Sue" Robertson

Citation edited from the recommendation by Amy Peterson

The 2010 recipient of the Lurlene W. Todd Award is Sue Robertson, retiring this year from Midlothian High School in Chesterfield County. The following comments are taken from the recommendation submitted for this award.

After reading the description of the teacher this award was created to recognize, it seemed that the criteria had been set with Sue Robertson as it's model. There is nothing on the list that Sue has not achieved with great distinction and many times over. She built the program at Midlothian from the ground up. When she started teaching Latin at Midlothian, there were only 40 students enrolled. At its height, there were four Latin teachers at the school. The Latin Club she created is a large reason for that success. There have been well over 100 members in the club, and often over 200 in recent years.

Sue is a taskmaster who gets as much as she can out of her students. They love her for the growth she sparks in them and the ways she makes their learning fun. Like the Romans, Sue is an expert at taking an idea and making it better than the original, suiting it to a particular lesson or needs of her class.

Several of her students have been motivated by her teaching to go on to the highest level of honor for a teacher, pursuit of classics beyond high school. Countless students have come back to tell of their joyous experiences in classics classes in college. More than one student of Sue's has gone on to become either a Latin teacher or classics professor.

Sue is a generous giver of herself, her time, her knowledge, her enthusiasm, and even her money to the cause of her students and Latin. Her focus is constantly on others. She sets high standards for her students and her colleagues, but most of all she sets high standards for herself. She is the epitome of service. I can think of no other person more deserving of this award or any other. She is not just worthy of being the "teacher of the year", she is the teacher of a lifetime.

Midlothian's Sue Robertson and student Bryan Kauder show their enthusiasm for each other's recognition by the CAV.

CAMWS-Southern Section Meeting 2010

The Department of Classical Studies at the University of Richmond cordially invites CAMWS members to the 90th Anniversary Meeting of the CAMWS-SS in Richmond, October 28-30, 2010 in conjunction with the Centennial celebration of the Classical Association of Virginia (CAV).

Events will be held at the Omni Richmond Hotel in the historic Shockoe Bottom area of downtown Richmond, and on the beautiful, wooded campus of the University of Richmond in the city's suburban West End.

The Omni Richmond Hotel is conveniently located within walking distance of great restaurants and historic sites such as

- The Virginia State Capitol
- The Edgar Allen Poe Museum
- The Museum of the Confederacy
- The American Civil War Center

Hotel reservations for your stay in Richmond may be made by calling 1-800-THE-OMNI (1.800.843.6664). Room rates are $129 a night, single or double (plus 13% taxes). Reservations must be made by October 1, 2010. Please help us fill our room block by registering at the Omni, the official meeting site.

Meeting registration information for the CAMWS-SS meeting in Richmond can be downloaded from

<http://www.camws.org>

Membership in CAMWS costs $25 for students, retirees, and first-year teachers or $45 for regular individual members. To join, see <http://www.camws.org/membership/index.html>
